DIRECTORS-AT-LARGE: Paul Brennan, Bridget Brownlow, Kelly Curran, Dean Gibbons, Carly MacDonald, Elizabeth MacDonald, Ron MacEachern and Tony O'Carroll

Irish Embassy Newsletter

Since last summer, the Irish Embassy in Ottawa has published the first three issues of "Irish Embassy Ottawa Newsletter". The Newsletter is available on the Embassy's website, at <http://embassyofireland.ca>.

Each issue contains a lead article by Dr. Ray

Bassett, Ireland's Ambassador to Canada, together with information from Ireland and pieces on the many links between Ireland and Canada.

One item likely to interest many Canadians of Irish ancestry is the Certificate of Irish Heritage, available from the Irish government to all who can establish their Irish descent.

Current affairs are also addressed in the publication. The latest issue has a piece on the new Irish Canadian Immigration Centre recently opened in Toronto, touching on a subject topical in both Ireland and Canada.

The Saint Patrick's Church Restoration Society warmly invites you to our 5th Annual

Irish Smells

Saint Mary's University Chair of Irish Studies D'Arcy McGee Lecture

Thursday, March 1st, at 7:00 pm

Ireland reeked throughout the nineteenth century from the pages of English representation.

The reputed stench of its cabins, cesspools, and dungheaps became a shameful index of national backwardness and the essential mark of Irish olfactory identity. In response to the odor of primitiveness that clung to them also, Ireland's rising middle classes set about a program of national decontamination. Led by the emblematic figure of native Victorian propriety, the Catholic priest, this modernizing class carried the mantras of civility and hygiene to the countryside and the rural home, imposing upon a recalcitrant peasantry a new, "enlightened," olfactory register predicated on an intolerance of traditional odors.

The groundwork for this transformation was the castigation of Ireland's domestic cottage by English observers and, in particular, the metonymic substitution of the peasantry's pigs for Irish national character – a discursive reordering that, though it encountered resistance from a peasantry devoted to an old Gaelic order of sensory values, was completed and even sanctified by a Catholic Church bent on producing modern, disciplined subjects. The smells of everyday life, as a result, took on new meanings. This paper examines Irish and British literary and historical texts around the turn of the twentieth century to uncover that meaning and expose the role of olfaction in the production of the peculiar Gaelo-Catholic ideology of domesticity that until recent decades governed rural Ireland.

Come join Dr. Joseph Nugent from Boston College as he dives into this matter at the Sobey Theatre, Thursday, March 1, 2012 at 7:00 p.m.

Crossroads Ceili!

Back by popular demand and just in time for St Patrick's Day, it's the Crossroads Ceili!

Join us March 3, 7:00 pm, at St Thomas Aquinas Church hall, 6350 Cornwall Street, Halifax.

This is an all ages event featuring some of the city's finest Celtic musicians (Kevin Roach, Glenn Coolen, Jane Lombard, Mark Currie), easy set, ceili and two-hand dances with instruction from Elizabeth MacDonald and Colleen Putt, performances from the Diaga Irish Dancers, and more! Last year's event was filled to capacity, so mark it on your calendar. Snacks and beverages available.

Admission $10 / $8 students and children.

Proudly sponsored by An Cumann: The Irish Association of Nova Scotia
